

How does the international SIM card help to reduce your phone bills while traveling

You love to travel a lot and apart from that, your business necessitates you to go on foreign trips every now and then. If you are a smart traveler then there is no doubt that you are using an international SIM card and enjoying the benefits of low call charges.

It has to be used to be believed. There are many persons who just do not want to believe that these cards can save them the amount it promises, but once they understand the logic behind the same, they understand its potentials.

As long as you are using your normal SIM card in a different country, all the calls made by you, even if they are within that country or to someone in your own country, are treated as international calls and you have to pay the high tariffs for the same.

To explain it in a better way, here is a small example. Suppose you are from the USA and are traveling in Rome and want to make a call to an associate who is also in Rome. The call that you are making is first routed through the local network to your USA network and from there back to Rome.

These routings make the local call get charged as an international one. If someone from USA calls you, you have to pay the roaming charges, since your call is being terminated with the help of the local network, which in all probabilities is different from your USA network. The moment your phone is equipped with the international SIM card, things happen differently. The call that you are making to your Roman contact is perceived as a local call and is charged at the local call rates.

When your wife calls you from the USA, she will be paying international call charges and since you have an Italian number and are using an Italian network, you do not have to pay anything extra for receiving the call.

There are some service providers who have their presence in more than 150 countries and by using international SIM cards of these service providers you can easily hop between any of these countries and still pay local call rates for your calls made within that country.

This technology works only on unlocked GSM phones and in case you do not have one, the providers of these international SIM cards will provide you with one for a nominal charge. In case you still have any doubts, just try making 10 local calls while abroad to your contact in that country using your own SIM card.

Try the same using an international SIM card. The difference will be there for you to see. If this is not reason enough, would you like to carry 45 SIM cards with you the next time you plan to visit 45 countries on your next business trip?

About the Author

Why take a chance of running a huge phone bill with your standard card? An international SIM card or even a France SIM card can help you to substantially cut down on your phone call charges. In UK it makes sense to use an UK SIM card. To know more, visit their website today.

Source: <http://www.marksmimi.com>